Nominal Use Scenarios

Use Story 1

Stakeholders

- A citizen that has an interesting document, photo, or story
- A historian interested in doing research and using the website to help them.

The user visits the site wishing to add a historical document of their grandparents. They then click on the geographic point the document is in relation to. They then take pictures of the document and add those, along with background details of the document to the point.

The historian visits the site wishing to add to their research. With the collection of user uploaded documents and photos they are able to select from a wide range of histories. They also can upload their discoveries and research afterwards.

Use Story 2

Stakeholders

- A user who wishes to comment on a picture.
- A historian browsing the site who has more background information

The user visits the site and browses it. They find a picture related to them and comment on it, adding biographical or other details to the picture. They then save their picture using their Facebook or Google user account, allowing others to both read and add to the photo or document.

A historian browses the site for research and finds the story. He contacts the author and interviews the user about the story. The historian continues his research and publishes a magazine article on the information.
