

Brief Overview of the System

The project aims to develop an app to monitor and record mass spawning events on Australia's coral reefs. Using the app, citizen scientists will upload their observations and photos to a database, allowing scientists to track the timing of mass coral spawning over time and potentially identify long-term changes in the patterns of mass coral spawning.