

The project is going to be a web application that is developed to run on a mobile device with local caching. This will take a list of ingredients given by the user and then send this information to an ai bot and get a response that is in json which will be translated and given to the user. The user can then use these recipes or tweak it and try again with the ai. Once the recipe is cooked the ingredients will then leave the cache from the user's device.